Heylo Enterprise enables an organization to have one central bank account to collect payments including paid events and memberships from all groups in the organization. Payouts are centralized to the organization bank account.

Required membership dues can provide access to all groups in the organization and can be tracked and reported by the original sourcing group. Each local group leader can see their individual group reporting, but not reporting across the organization. The organization admins can see reporting across the entire organization.

Organizations can elect to centralize banking or allow groups in the organization to manage their own banking and payments.
